New List View

Reading Lists Online will have a new look next academic year. The new list view will be more accessible and aims to help students engage more with lists, as well as make it more intuitive.

Here’s a sneak preview of what you can expect: https://talis.wistia.com/medias/zi937scw8f
Check, edit, publish…

As Semester 2 is now underway, don’t forget to check, edit and publish your reading lists, as they will be visible to students.

Check the list is up to date. Is the module title correct? Is it attached to the correct module code? Have you included a range of relevant, current resources?

If you need to make any changes, you need to edit the list. Remove any items which you no longer want and add any new resources you would like your students to consult.

When you have finished checking and editing your list, remember to publish it! The earlier you publish your list the sooner the Library will be able order new books & resources, and check for new editions.

RLO - Did you know? – Myth busting some common misconceptions about RLO

Myth
I can give my reading list any name I want.

Fact
The name you give your module reading list should match ModCat if it is a current module, or UTReg if it is subject to approval. If you have any personal reading lists, for example for your research, then you can give those any name which is useful to you.

Myth
If I can’t find a link to the resource I want online, I can’t add it to my reading list.

Fact
You can add items into RLO manually by using ‘My Bookmarks’. Select ‘Add bookmark’ and choose ‘Add manually’.

Myth
If I’m using my iPad, I can’t bookmark to RLO.

Fact
There is information available here: http://libguides.tees.ac.uk/RLO/gettingstarted which explains how to set up a shortcut on your iPad to add items into RLO.
